About Hunters Woods Village Center

2254 Hunters Woods Plaza, Reston, VA

Hunters Woods Village Center in Reston, Virginia is a well-positioned neighborhood retail and service hub anchored by everyday essentials such as Safeway, Rite Aid, Jersey Mike's, Dunkin', and a mix of local service tenants and eateries, all organized around a walkable plaza format that serves the surrounding residential community. The center sits on approximately 12.8 acres of non-residential land with direct access from Glade Drive and Colts Neck Road, making it a convenient destination for residents within South Reston. Within a one-mile radius of the property, there are nearly 20,000 residents and over 7,300 households, with median household incomes approaching $163,000 and daytime population exceeding 20,000, while the three-mile trade area supports nearly 120,000 people and household incomes above $205,000. This demographic profile reflects a mix of established households and active adults with strong spending power and a high rate of college education.

Reston itself is a mature, mixed-use community founded on principles of integrated living connecting residential, retail, office, and recreational space with as Hunters Woods is one of its original village centers. The broader market around the center benefits from a stable population base, a high average age in the late 30s, and housing values that reflect the strength of the local real estate market, with median home values well above regional averages. The presence of community assets such as the Reston Community Center, nearby senior living developments, and convenient transit options contribute to consistent foot traffic and ongoing neighborhood activity. With strong demographics, solid household incomes, and a location within the greater Washington-Arlington-Alexandria metro area, Hunters Woods Village Center continues to play an important role as a neighborhood-serving retail destination within Reston's larger economic framework.
